was V.P. (Claude is Pres.) of the Fairhope Single Tax Advocates. The Arnolds taught Progress and Poverty classes in Fairhope. The Arnolds were frequent attenders of the annual Council of Georgist Organizations conferences and hosted the 1994 conference in Fairhope. They had attended Henry George School conferences prior to the first Joint Georgist Conference in 1977, which was a forerunner of the the Council of Georgist Organizations which was formally organized in 1980. Dian was the photographer who snapped the picture of the Common Ground-USA board meeting that was published in the Nov.-Dec. 2000 GroundSwell. Dian wrote the Single Tax Advocates of Fairhope report published in the Georgist Registry Report published in the Jan.-Feb. 2002 GroundSwell.

A Native of Trussville, AL, Dian was a graduate of the Organic School of Fairhope. She is remembered for her cowgirl attire and her love of horses. She was a member of the First Church of Christ Scientist. Survivors include her husband Claude and children Tom, Willis, Seth, Mignon, Carolyn, Alodia, and three grandchildren.

The Henry George Institute named its simulation exercise in which a fictional African nation adopted a Georgist reform program the Alodia project after the Arnolds' youngest daughter. Memorials may be made to the Organic School, Fairhope, or to the Henry George Foundation of America, Philadelphia (of which Claude is a member of the Board.)
